Note:

Plasticlad® exterior PVC products, as manufactured, may expand and contract due to temperature variations. To reduce or eliminate open joints, the preferred method is the use of adhesive commonly called pipe glue or PVC pipe cement. When bonded correctly with this adhesive, the joint becomes an integral part of the system to which it is being applied.

What Is a Column?

The dictionary defines a column as a pillar consisting of a base, a shaft and a capital, known as a cap...

The base is known as the foundation of the structure. Upon the base is the shaft itself, providing the height as well as the strength for the column. Positioned at the top of the shaft, graceful as well as functional, the capital crowns the column.

Columns come in a variety of designs, including traditional fluted and embossed styles. Unique designs have been translated and refined over centuries to provide the exact artistic effect desired in today's modern construction.

These various styles provide just the right statement needed to bring any home that special curb appeal. More importantly the unique composite material in Columns Unlimited by Plasticlad® provides design appeal reflecting the majesty that transforms a home into a castle.
